With a Sprinter you'll save up to $6,400 over 5 years. That's a lot of lumber.

Sure, you'd expect a Mercedes-Benz to be an expensive acquisition. But the truth is with its amazing fuel efficiency – via our BlueTEC diesel engine – and 15,000 kilometer maintenance intervals, the 2011 Sprinter will cost you less to own over 5 years compared to the competition. In fact, up to $6,400¹ less – which is money better spent on your business. How's that for a Mercedes?

The 2011 Mercedes-Benz Sprinter. Starting from $42,900.*

There are Always Reasons for Optimism

Most new home builders, renovators and developers I know are greeting 2012 with a mixture of caution and optimism. We tend to be glass-half-full folks, but we're also a careful lot—with good reason!

Having closed the books on 2011, and the array of challenges it brought, we're very focused on making the most from every opportunity the next year brings us. That is the true strength of our industry: We are entrepreneurs who never stop looking forward.

As businesspeople, it is certainly challenging to plan in an economic environment so dominated by events beyond our borders. Everything from interest rates, to employment growth, to lenders' willingness to do business with us, seems tied to what governments in other countries either do, or fail to do. Not an easy time to make important business decisions.

I'm constantly amazed by the array of headlines purporting to explain the current state of Canadian housing markets—as if a single summary can represent the diverse range of markets we operate in.

Lately, the "hot button" topic has been housing "bubbles" and the risks these involve. Now, I don't know what your recent experience has been but, for most builders, in most markets across Canada, both price increases and sales of new homes have been modest lately, to say the least.

In fact, since before the recession, almost two-thirds of markets across Canada have seen new home prices increase at less than the inflation rate (or even decline). This is in the face of constantly increasing government-imposed costs and growing efforts by governments to make it difficult (and costly) to build the product most consumers want: a single-family home.

The CHBA puts a great deal of time and effort into reading the economic "tea leaves" and getting the latest insights out to members. For any Association member who has attended a meeting of the CHBA's Economic Research Committee (ERC), the value of this work is clear.

At the upcoming CHBA National Conference to be held in Mont-Tremblant in March, we'll once again benefit from the work of our ERC members and contributors. In addition, the CHBA National Conference's Economic Session will bring together a panel of leading economists, including McGill University's William Watson, to examine what lies ahead.

The "Next Generation" of R-2000 Launched

As a Saskatchewan builder, I've always looked at the R-2000 initiative with some pride. After all, R-2000 was "born" in my province.

Since the first R-2000 homes were built in the early 1980s, this important voluntary initiative has produced an amazing range of technical innovations that can be found in virtually every new home built today. Think of the tighter envelope construction we now practice, or the widespread use of heat recovery ventilators. The list goes on and on.

When the first R-2000 Technical Standard was published, it was viewed as something almost unachievable. But, as builders took ownership of R-2000, they brought their drive to innovate, and a good measure of common-sense, to bear. As a result, higher home energy performance was brought into the mainstream of construction practice.

Today, a number of provincial building codes require energy performance that is generally in line with what the R-2000 Standard pioneered. The other provinces are likely to follow suit in the near future, following the release of new requirements in the National Building Code later this year. And for a great many of us, this will have relatively little impact, as we are already building at this level of performance—or higher.

The fact that something that was once considered "almost unachievable" has become fairly commonplace testifies to the continuous improvement that characterizes our industry. We are all looking for effective and efficient ways to improve our homes and deliver better value to our customers, at a price they can afford.

For three decades, R-2000 has played an incredibly important part in allowing us to do this.

Given the tremendous past benefits from R-2000, I'm very pleased that the "next generation" R-2000 Standard has now been launched. CHBA members put a lot of time and effort into developing the next generation of this initiative, and I'm excited to see it move forward in 2012.

"Next generation" R-2000 homes will deliver energy efficiency that is 50 per cent higher than the old Standard required. In relation to the EnerGuide Rating System, this means approximately an ERS 86 rating.

As a performance-based Standard, R-2000 will continue to provide innovative builders with tremendous flexibility in how they achieve this level of energy efficiency.

And that inherent flexibility, within a voluntary and market-driven context, is the key to ensuring a continuing flow of housing innovations from R-2000's leading-edge builders, to everyone in our industry. History proves that this works, and works well!

I'm also very pleased that the "next generation" ENERGY STAR for New Homes requirements will be released in the near future. While R-2000 has regained its rightful place as Canada's leading edge new home Standard, ENERGY STAR provides a voluntary label platform well suited to the needs of volume builders.

The "next generation" ENERGY STAR home will see an energy performance boost of around 20 per cent, placing it roughly mid-point between code requirements and the R-2000 Standard.

The renewal of both the R-2000 and ENERGY STAR for New Homes initiatives has involved a lot of commitment and effort by CHBA members, and by Natural Resources Canada, which controls these labels.

The level of cooperation between industry members and government staff has been constructive and commendable. And the process used to develop both of these “next generation” initiatives has been very impressive in its thoroughness and its openness.

I’m looking forward to seeing the first ‘next generation’ R-2000 homes hit the market—and in congratulating the new home builders who achieve this!

We are all looking for effective and efficient ways to improve our homes and deliver better value to our customers, at a price they can afford.

A Step Forward On Infrastructure

For over 20 years, the CHBA has been advocating three major approaches to investment in Canada’s municipal infrastructure:

- A clear, evidence-based plan for linking federal, provincial, and municipal efforts in a way that addresses the actual state of Canada’s infrastructure;
- Application of financial instruments that reflect fairly the benefits of basic urban infrastructure;
- Measurement and transparent reporting to the public of progress toward achieving infrastructure goals at all levels of government.

Toward the end of last year, the federal Minister of Transport, Infrastructure and Communities, the Hon. Denis Lebel, announced a three-step process leading to a long-term infrastructure plan for Canada. This commitment represents a major step forward for our industry and for Canadian consumers and users of infrastructure in particular.

The three phases in the federal plan are:

- Taking Stock, which is already underway in the winter of 2011-2012

The Government of Canada will work together with provincial, territorial and municipal partners to review past infrastructure investments and initiatives and examine their benefits for communities.

- Identifying Priorities, which will use the evidence from the first phase during the period from the winter of 2012 and into the summer of this year

To help ensure all levels of government have key information to make informed decisions on infrastructure investments, the federal government will work with governments, private sector investors, and stakeholders, as well as with technical experts and academics, to build knowledge around five broad themes:

1. Infrastructure and the Economy
 2. Infrastructure and the Environment
 3. Infrastructure and Stronger Communities
 4. Financing Infrastructure
 5. Asset Planning and Sustainability
- Informing the Next Agenda, which will happen in the summer and fall of 2012

Building on the work of the first two phases, there will be in-depth discussions among federal, provincial, territorial and municipal partners and other key investors and stakeholders. Together, they will explore the principles and future directions for public infrastructure in Canada, and discuss key lessons learned from past plans and programs that can help develop the long-term public infrastructure plan. The plan itself would likely be reflected in federal and other budgets in 2013.

The CHBA is in ongoing communication with the key federal officials involved in this planning process and will contribute the research it has carried out over a full range of infrastructure issues.

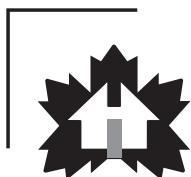

2011 CHBA National SAM Awards

Congratulations to all of the Finalists named this month for the 2011 CHBA National SAM Awards, Presented by Schlage and Trane. “This year’s SAM Award theme—Create and Transform—says it all,” commented CHBA’s Acting President, Ron Olson, on this year’s finalists. “These new home builders, renovators and developers are indeed creating and transforming communities across the country in exceptional ways. The quality and creativity they have demonstrated is truly remarkable and exciting. We are very proud to see our industry represented by these fine projects.”

Winners will be announced at the 2012 CHBA National Conference in Mont-Tremblant, Québec on March 17. To access the full listing of 2011 SAM finalists, visit www.chba.ca/SAMS.

Speakers Confirmed for Create and Transform in Mont-Tremblant

Confirmed Conference speakers at the 2012 CHBA National Conference include General Rick Hillier, former Chief of the Defence Staff for Canadian Forces; Mitch Joel, author of the business bestseller Six Pixels of Separation and columnist on digital media; Sean Wise, venture capitalist and known for his role on CBC Television’s Dragon’s Den; McGill University Professor and author William Watson, who will discuss business opportunities during transformative times and participate in the annual Economic Session; and, Dr. Nick Bontis, ranked among the Top 30 management gurus worldwide, and recognized as “a pioneer and one of the world’s real experts in intellectual capital.” To register, or for more details on speakers and events, visit www.chba.ca/conference.

Perfectly seamless

Presenting a truly flush fit with the new integrated bottom-mount refrigerator.

Perfectly seamless

A fully integrated design that offers a truly flush fit with surrounding cabinetry.

First HFC-free refrigerator in Canada

Free of ozone depleting Hydrofluorocarbon (HFC), the refrigerator's global warming impact is substantially lower than typical household refrigerators.

High performance convertible drawer

A convertible drawer goes from a refrigerator to a freezer to wine storage - all with the simple use of the illuminated, glass touch digital controls.

Ramp-up LED Lighting

Crisp, white lighting increases as the doors are opened until full illumination.

Markant by ACO DrainMat™

DrainMat is the ideal solution to protect entrances from water and debris. DrainMat is not an ordinary foot scraper; it is a system consisting in a base tray and a top grate and can be used as a drain as well. DrainMat offers the same quality and design excellence as ACO™'s commercial products but is designed to meet the demands and budget of the residential customer.

Homeowners want both beauty and brains.
Give them both.

From touch faucets that make daily tasks easier to our diamond-coated valve that provides years of trouble-free performance, innovation comes standard with every Delta® product. Which, we think, homeowners will find very attractive. Another way Delta is more than just a faucet.
